

Watec Peru 2014

May, 7-9, 2014, Jardín Vivero del Jockey Club, Lima - Peru

Description: The international exhibition and conference on water technology and environment control

Facts

- 70% of the world's tropical glaciers are in the Peruvian Andes. In 2006, also, 72% of the total electricity generation in Peru came from hydropower plants.
- About 80% of water extraction in Peru is used for irrigation and 65% of that water is wasted by inefficient irrigation systems. At least US$100 millions are being allocated by the Peruvian Ministry of Agriculture in order to develop new irrigation projects.
- 70% of the Peruvian population is concentrated in the desert coast of Peru, where only 2% of the national water resources are found. Lima, the capital of Peru and the second biggest city in a desert in the world, for instance, has 1.9 millions inhabitants that lack drinking water and sanitary sewer. Therefore, water treatment plants are highly demanded for domestic and industry purposes along the country, in order to fulfill current strict environmental regulations and to reach higher standards of living.
- WHO WILL ATTEND WATEC PERU 2014? Among several public and private representatives: Rural communities, Representatives of regulatory bodies, Wastewater operators and many more. Watec Peru will enable, in the same space, meetings between entrepreneurs, professionals, authorities and South American public officials.
